Description

Fractal Designs Node 804. This micro ATX chassis focuses on cooling performance and maximum configurability, all packed in an interesting form factor with elegant Scandinavian design. Highly effective dual chamber case layout for best possible cooling. Minimalistic design with an elegant brushed aluminum front panel. Unique hard drive mounting system. The dual chamber layout in the Node 804 separates hot running components from the cooler ones and allows for unrestricted airflow over the motherboard, processor and graphics card.

Features

- Highly effective dual chamber case layout for best possible cooling with excellent water cooling compatibility, supporting up to four radiators simultaneously
- Minimalistic design with an elegant brushed aluminum front panel
- Unique hard drive mounting system, fitting up to 8x 3.5", 4x 2.5" or up to 10x 3.5", 2x 2.5" drives

HDD/SSD

- Three Fractal Design Silent Series R2 fans included with the case and space for an additional seven fans, fan controller included
- Featuring a window side panel to show off your set up in style
- Additional space in the front to mount a slim slot-in ODD, optical bay drive, and 2x 2.5" drives
- Five expansion slots that allows for multiple GPU setups

Water-cooling ready

Excellent water cooling support with space for up to four radiators simultaneously.

"The Node 804 is a micro-ATX chassis that makes clever use of space. Served up in a cube form factor, this sleek-looking box is dwarfed by traditional enthusiast towers yet, with the right components, will more than hold its own in regards to performance."

Hexus.net Read the full review

"The Fractal Design NODE 804 is, ultimately, big and bulky - call it is the Sumo ringer of mATX cube cases. But it can hold a ton of hardware - you may even run out of components to install before the NODE 804 breaks a sweat. "

Techpowerup.com Read the full review

"With the Node 804, not only do we have curves and a mix of plastic and steel mesh, but everything is made to look sleek and simple in any situation; even down to the brushed texture, the tiny name next to the LED, and the front I/O being around the side."
