Short Description

The AcoustiPack™ 5.25" Foam Block can be used inside any vacant optical drive bay to help increase the absorption of unwanted sound energy. Once installed, the foam block also helps to reduce the internal air volume inside your PC or server case, which in turn may improve airflow velocity and cooling performance.

Description

The AcoustiPack™ 5.25" Foam Block can be used inside any vacant optical drive bay to help increase the absorption of unwanted sound energy. Once installed, the foam block also helps to reduce the internal air volume inside your PC or server case, which in turn may improve airflow velocity and cooling performance.

The blocks are made from professional-grade dense acoustic foam, which is certified to UL94-HF1 fire rating. The foam is especially effective at absorbing sound at higher frequencies, such as HDD whine or high-pitched noise from oscillating motherboard components. The foam is black and flexible enough to perfectly friction-fit into any empty 5¼" drive bay.

Features

This pack is suitable for:

Suitable for any PC with a free 3½" drive bay, and/or a free 5¼" drive bay.

NOTE: The blocks must not be used directly against warm components - always allow adequate circulation around adjacent components such as HDDs.

NOTE: The blocks must not be used directly against warm components - always allow adequate circulation around adjacent components such as HDDs.
